

Gilbert White and Recording: Past, Present and Future

A Celebration of the 50th Anniversary of Gilbert White's House & the Oates Museum sponsored by Hampshire County Council and Vitacress Salads, venue University of Southampton, 20th September 2005.

Vitacress Salads is delighted to be one of the primary sponsors of an ecological conference being organised by the Gilbert White and Oates Museum and the University of Southampton.

Gilbert White and Recording: Past, Present and Future celebrates the life and work of Gilbert White who is regarded by many as England's first ecologist and founding father of modern scientific recording.

The conference will take place at the University of Southampton on 20 September and includes a programme of prestigious speakers including Lord May of Oxford, President of the Royal Society, Bob Headland of the Polar Research Institute and Professor Jeremy Greenwood of the British Trust for Ornithology.

Our business is closely linked with the local community and environment and we are fiercely committed to these fundamental areas to ensure our customers receive the freshest and healthiest produce from our farms. We will be present at the conference giving out literature and information about Vitacress. Some of our farmers will be joining the delegates and we hope to be serving Vitacress salads at lunch during the day.

We are very encouraged that the conference will raise the profile of Gilbert White and his work and demonstrate the importance of biological recording and monitoring and we are delighted to be supporting the conference and working in partnership with the University of Southampton and the Gilbert White and Oates Museum.
